Section 2. Composition and Selection.

- (a) Composition of the Labor-management committee.

The labor-management committee shall be composed of an equal number of representatives from the management and rank-and-file employees.

- (b) Selection of labor representatives.

In a business enterprise with duly recognized or certified labor organizations, the labor representatives to the labor-management committee shall be those designated by the collective bargaining agent(s) of the bargaining unit(s). In a business enterprise without duly recognized or certified labor organizations, the labor representatives shall be elected by at least a majority of all rank-and-file employees who have rendered a minimum of six (6) months continuous service.

Section 3. Voting Rights. Both management and labor shall have equal voting rights.

Section 4. Effect on Existing Labor-Management Committee. A business enterprise with existing labor-management committees established for other purposes may form a new labor-management committee or use the existing labor-management committee to establish a productivity incentives program; provided that the conditions stated in Sections 2 & 3 hereof and Section 1, Rule VII of these Rules are met.

Rule IV

PRODUCTIVITY INCENTIVES PROGRAM

Section 1. Objectives and Scope. The productivity incentives program shall clearly state its immediate and long term objectives and the effects of such on the employees' welfare and the business enterprise as a whole. It shall embody, in general terms, an implementation plan and a summary of strategies to be undertaken to attain such objectives.

The productivity incentives program shall specify the organizational units and functional areas that will be covered by the program.

Section 2. Components. The productivity incentives program shall be composed of the following:

(a) Productivity Improvement Program.

The productivity improvement program shall include any intervention or scientific/systematic process designed to increase productivity of the various factor inputs such as materials, labor, capital, and energy. The program may be geared towards improved human resource management and effective and efficient use of other resources, e.g., waste reduction, energy conservation and maintenance improvement.

(b) Productivity Gainsharing Program.

The Productivity Gainsharing Program shall specify an incentives system whereby employees are given an equitable share from gains brought about by improved productivity. Business enterprises with existing productivity gainsharing programs may convert the same into a productivity incentives program provided the conditions contained herein are met.

(c) Manpower Trainings and Special Studies.

Any manpower training and special study proposed by the labor-management committee aimed at developing skills of rank-and-file employees may be included in the productivity incentives program. For purposes of accreditation, such training and studies shall specify the following:

1. Objective/s of training program
2. Type of training
3. Training schedule
4. Program of activities
5. Course content or syllabus

7. Evaluation scheme for the proposed training

Section 3. Contents. The productivity incentives program shall contain the following:

(a) Methods and Formulas to Measure Productivity.

The productivity measures indicate the total and/or partial relation between outputs and inputs expressed in physical and/or monetary terms. Some of the generally accepted measures of productivity which may be adopted by the labor-management committee to determine productivity gains and bonuses are:

1) Value of Production Approach.

$$\text{Total Factor Productivity} = \frac{\text{Total Value of Output}}{\text{Total Cost}}$$

$$\text{Partial Productivity} = \frac{\text{Total Value of Output}}{\text{Cost of Specific Factor Input}}$$

where :

Total value of output = quantity x selling price

2) Value-Added Approach

Total Value-Added Total Value Added
Productivity = Company Inputs

where:

Total value-added = Total value of output -
intermediate inputs;

Intermediate Inputs = raw materials consumed, energy costs and other inputs such as purchases and services supplied by outside sources; and Company inputs = those contributed by the company other than intermediate inputs.

(b) Factors in Determining Productivity Bonuses.

This refers to the factors to be considered in measuring productivity gains as identified by the labor-management committee. These factors as well as the methods/formulas to measure productivity agreed upon by both parties shall form the bases in determining the amount of the productivity bonus for distribution.

Manner of Sharing Productivity Bonuses.

The list of employees entitled to productivity bonuses shall be drawn up, including the method of sharing such bonuses, the percentage share of each employee and the period of distribution of bonuses. Said list shall be updated from time to time to reflect changes in employment status like separation, retirement, resignation, promotion and hiring of new personnel.

Names and Positions of the Labor-Management Committee Representatives.

The names of the representatives to the labor-management committee, their positions in the company, and their term of office as labor-management committee representatives shall be specified.

(c) Names of Voluntary Arbitrators or Panel of Voluntary Arbitrators.

The name of the voluntary arbitrator or panel of voluntary arbitrators chosen and agreed upon by the labor-management committee shall be included in the productivity incentives program.

(d) Other Terms and Conditions of the Productivity Incentives

Other terms and conditions of the program shall be specified, including agreements on the renewal of the productivity incentives program, the number of labor and management representatives, the process of electing representatives and substitutes by both parties, the provision in case of declining productivity, and other related terms.

Section 4. Ratification. The productivity incentives program shall be ratified in writing by at least a majority of covered employees who have rendered a minimum of six (6) months continuous service, within sixty (60) days from the time signing of the agreement by the labor-management committee.

Section 5. Submission to RTWPB. The ratified productivity incentives program shall be submitted in three (3) copies to the appropriate RTWPB together with proof of ratification, e.g., an affidavit stating the number of covered employees and the number of votes cast in favor of the program. The RTWPB shall review said program within (60) calendar days from receipt thereof to determine compliance with these Rules. Where manpower trainings and special studies are included in the program, same shall be reviewed appropriate RMDO.

Section 6. Notification of BIR. A business enterprise shall submit a copy of the productivity incentives program to the BIR for information and record purposes.

Section 7. Amendments to the Productivity Incentives Programs. Any amendment to the productivity incentives program shall be deemed valid provided the requirements set in Sections 4 to 6 hereof are met.

Section 8. Technical Support in the Development of Productivity Incentives Program. I At the request of any party, the NWPC or its appropriate RTWPB shall provide the necessary studies, technical information and assistance, and expert advice to enable the parties to conclude productivity agreements.

Rule V

PRODUCTIVITY BONUSES

Section 1. Productivity Bonuses. Productivity bonuses granted to labor under the productivity incentives program may be in cash and/or non-cash incentives, as agreed by both parties, and shall not be less than half of the percentage increase in the productivity of the business enterprise over and above the average for the preceding three (3) consecutive years; provided, that for enterprises that have been in operation for less than three (3) years, the labor management committee therein may agree on other base periods for determining productivity increases.

Section 2. Frequency of Granting Productivity Bonuses. The productivity bonuses over and above the existing bonuses granted by the business enterprise and by law shall be given to employees not later than every six(6) months from the start of the productivity incentives program; provided that said bonuses shall not be deemed as salary increases due to the employees and workers; provided further that upon agreement by both parties, payment of bonuses may be deferred, but not longer than one year from date payment of said bonuses are due.

Rule VI

TAX INCENTIVES

Section 1. Rate of Deductions.

- a. (a) Subject to the provisions of Section 7 of the Act and Rule IV hereof, a business enterprise which adopts a productivity incentives program, duly agreed upon by the labor-management committee, shall be granted a special deduction from the gross income equivalent to fifty percent (50%) of the total productivity bonuses given to employees under the program in addition to the total allowable ordinary and necessary business deductions for said bonuses as provided for under the National Internal Revenue Code, as amended.
- b. (b) A business enterprise providing manpower training and special studies to rank-and-file employees as accredited by the RMDO may avail of the special deduction from gross income equivalent to fifty (50%) percent of the total grants for local trainings and special studies given to employees under the program in addition to the allowable ordinary and necessary business deductions, for said grants as provided for under the National Revenue Code, as amended.

- c. (c) For business enterprises deriving income other than from within the Philippines, which grant manpower training abroad to rank-and-file employees, the related expense incurred in relation thereto, shall not be deducted in full but shall be determined on a ratable basis in accordance with Revenue Regulations No. 16-86 implementing the National Internal Revenue Code, as amended; provided that such qualifies as ordinary and necessary expenses.

Section 2. Period Considered for Tax Deduction. The deductions provided for in the Act shall be taken for the taxable year in which the productivity bonus has been "paid or accrued" or "paid or incurred" dependent upon the method of accounting upon the basis of which the income is computed, unless in order to clearly reflect the income, the deductions should be taken as of a different period as provided for under Section 39 of the National Internal Revenue Code, as amended.

Section 3. Eligibility of Tax Incentives on Training Grants. Within fifteen (15) calendar days after completion of the training program and/or special studies, the business enterprise shall submit to the appropriate RMDO a post-training report stating whether the objectives of the training program have been adequately met, plus the official receipts of training expenses. Upon submission of the post-training report by the business enterprise, the RMDO, within thirty (30) calendar days shall conduct a post-training evaluation to determine the acquisition of appropriate skills, knowledge and behavior and shall issue to the business enterprise the necessary Certificate of Tax Eligibility.

Section 4. Requirements for Granting Tax Incentives. The tax deductions stipulated in the Act may be availed of by the business enterprise upon filing the quarterly/final income tax return accompanied with the pertinent supporting documents.

Section 5. Effectivity of Tax Incentives. The special deductions from gross income provided for herein shall be allowed starting the next taxable year after the effectivity of the Act.

Rule VII

DISPUTES AND GRIEVANCES

Section 1. Resolution

- a. Whenever disputes, grievances or other matters arise from the interpretation and implementation of the program as ratified by the parties, the labor-management committee shall meet to resolve the dispute.

- b. The labor-management committee may seek the assistance of the NCMB or its appropriate Regional Branch for such purpose.
- c. Any dispute which remains unresolved within twenty (20) calendar days from the time of the submission to the labor-management committee shall be submitted for voluntary arbitration in line with the pertinent provisions of the Labor Code, as amended.
